Raised here in the South West, I value the lifestyle, natural environment, and strong sense of community that makes our region unique. I want to ensure sustainable and responsible growth for future generations.

As a health professional working in epidemiology and health promotion, I am deeply passionate about public health, and fostering healthy, resilient communities. With qualifications in health science, epidemiology, and management, I work across hospital and community settings in child health and youth services. I regularly volunteer with community groups and events, contributing to initiatives that celebrate diversity and community well-being.

I believe local government must prioritise genuine community engagement, protecting our natural environment, and ensuring decisions are transparent, inclusive, and evidence-based. My vision is for a progressive, collaborative council, which supports community and local businesses with sustainable development and enabling healthy active lives.
